The Life Of A Sinner

We live in a world full of sinners and I am a sinner that enjoyed sinning and thought I could sin with no consequences. However, everything you do in life has a consequence whether it be good or bad.

I lied to everyone, had sex with many women, I was a thief, and I really didn't care about the consequences of my bad deeds but kept doing them. I also wasn't afraid of going to hell like we're all told as young children.

I was a vain person, sneaky, and a backstabber. I conned women into bed and used them and was never a faithful husband. I was a bully, and a very dirty talker. I've done it all but never took a life.

I was raised in church, from the time I was born, and when I turned ten years old, my family moved away from our grandfather's. This was when I became a sinner and was a sinner through all of my youth and into my adult hood. My grandfather was a baptist preacher who kept us all on the good path. I feel that moving away from my grandfather was my downfall and pushed me to a life of sin.

You and I may or may not know it, but there will be a punishment for our sins, whether it be from God after he takes possession of your soul, or while you're still alive.

I have been punished many times over during my life as a sinner. I knew it was a punishment in most cases, but still I kept on sinning. Only after I got much older did I start realizing something was really wrong in my life and I had to change.

Whether you sin once, or ten times, one sin is too many. God forgives, but even God has his limits. I see people taking drugs and I look at their lives and how they usually die from taking drugs, and or, age very quickly from their drug abuse, and do you wonder why? It's because taking drugs is a self-punishment you bring upon yourself.

Why do we have so many people in prisons all around the world? Because they're sinners and they're being punished for their crimes while their still living. This doesn't mean that all of these criminals will go to hell, because a lot of them changed their lives for good, and started to believe in God.

If you do bad, you will get bad, and if you do good, you will get good. Now this is not to say something bad can't happen to you even if you only do good, because we live in a freewill world that all of us can do as we wish, and harming someone, or even taking someone's life can happen at the hands of someone with no compassion. Some ask, why does God allow this? We all know God's will, but don't follow it.

You only have to read the bible about Adam and Eve to know God wanted a world of people that did good and not bad, so God does not want someone harmed or killed by another person. It is that person's freewill that is at work, not God's will.

People blame God for the destruction from catastrophes that happen everywhere. God is blamed for children that are born sick and dying young. God is blamed for everything that man has caused because it's easier to blame a God you can't see or hear, or that you may or may not even believe in at all.

You can keep sinning and having fun while doing it but somewhere in time, there is going to be a reckoning either in your life while alive and for sure after God has your soul, and it will be too late for restitution. But you can do something about it now.

I'm much older now and when I sin, I feel afraid of what will happen to me, whether I get punished while living or after my death. We all sin and I can't say I'm free of sin now because I'm not. I am a much better person today than I was when young. I think more now about the consequences, plus I'm very afraid of God having my soul, and being punished by a God that gave me plenty of time to do right.

God blesses those who believe in him and will be with you no matter what you go through in your life good or bad and he will foregive you for the bad if you believe and just ask.
